Introduction

“We have seen first-hand in countries from every region the critical role women play as peace-builders, as community organizers, as voices for those who are marginalized. We are convinced that strengthening women’s leadership at every level is key to advancing peace, sustainable development and human rights in the 21st century.”

Mary Robinson,
Former President of Ireland and
UN High Commissioner for Human Rights

Ireland recognises the close links between the issues of peace, security, development and the promotion of gender equality and women’s human rights. Ireland’s National Action Plan (NAP) on United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 sets out how Ireland will promote and implement the objectives of the Resolution in its programme support activities, diplomatic advocacy and policy-making across the interrelated areas of peace, security and development.

UNSCR 1325 was adopted in 2000 and is an important watershed marking global recognition of the unique and disproportionate impact of conflict on women and girls. More importantly, UNSCR 1325 highlights the critical role of women and girls in conflict prevention, peace negotiations, peacebuilding and post-conflict reconstruction and governance and places these issues at the forefront of the UN Security Council’s deliberations on peace and security. UNSCR 1325 was complemented and strengthened by the adoption of Resolution 1820 in 2008;¹ UNSCR Resolution 1888 in 2009;² UNSCR 1889 also in 2009;³ and UNSCR 1960 in 2010.^{4 5}

The 10th anniversary of UNSCR 1325 in 2010 increased international attention on the Resolution and on its weak implementation to date. The Resolution not only focuses the world’s attention on the very different effects that war has on women and men, it also recognises that women should be active participants in rebuilding their communities and countries following conflict. The central demands of the Resolution are for the full participation of women at every level of decision-making that addresses issues relating to peace and security; protection of women and girls from gender-based violence; and the implementation of gender perspectives in all peacemaking, peacebuilding and peace agreement implementation strategies and actions that are undertaken by the UN and by Member States.

The provisions of UNSCR 1325 apply to all women and girls affected by conflict. The Resolution expresses concern that “particularly women and children account for the vast majority adversely affected by armed conflict, including as refugees and internally displaced persons ...” (Preamble, Para 4) and reaffirms “the need to implement international humanitarian and human rights laws that protect the rights of women and girls during and after conflicts.” (Preamble, Para 6). Subsequent UN resolutions 1820, 1888 and 1889 all affirm the obligations of state signatories under the Convention for the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW). Taken together, UNSCR 1325 and other UN obligations on WPS involve a duty of care towards migrant women and children, including refugees, affected by conflict wherever they may reside. The EU adopted an indicator on the proportion of women and men by country of origin obtaining refugee status, or benefitting from subsidiary protection in 2010, as part of the monitoring of EU’s Comprehensive Approach to the implementation of UNSCR 1325 and 1820.⁶

1 Recognises the direct relationship between sexual violence as a tactic of war and the maintenance of international peace and security

2 Calls for appointment of Special Representative to the Secretary General on Sexual Violence

3 Calls for the development of indicators to monitor implementation of 1325

4 Calls for a mechanism to compile data and listing of perpetrators of sexual violence in armed conflict

5 In this document UNSCR 1325, the subsequent resolutions 1820, 1880, 1888, 1889, and 1960, and other international commitments, e.g. CEDAW, will be referred to as UNSCR 1325 and other UN obligations on Women, Peace and Security (WPS) as it is widely acknowledged that implementation of UNSCR 1325 involves addressing the requirements of these subsequent resolutions and international commitments.

6 The Political and Security Committee in July 2010 adopted a set of indicators for the Comprehensive approach to the EU implementation of the United Nations Security Council Resolutions 1325 and 1820 on women, peace and security (Council of the European Union, 11948/10), dated 14 July 2010).

Ireland's Engagement with 1325

Ireland brings its own particular perspective to the implementation of UNSCR 1325 and other UN obligations on WPS. The people of Ireland have experienced the effects of the Northern Ireland conflict and successive governments have been actively engaged in peace negotiations to resolve the Northern Ireland conflict. Ireland has also welcomed those fleeing conflict from other parts of the world. Having experienced the challenges involved in moving from conflict to peace, Ireland has been a consistent and firm voice advocating for other states to commit to implementing UNSCR 1325. Ireland has made major strides in integrating the objectives of UNSCR 1325 into its international development co-operation programme, foreign policies and national strategies on gender equality, including addressing gender-based violence.

Ireland participates in a number of international fora tasked with the promotion of UNSCR 1325, including active participation in the intergovernmental 'Group of Friends of UNSCR 1325'. At the EU level, Ireland is actively involved in efforts to develop an EU Action Plan on UNSCR 1325 and EU indicators, through its participation on the EU Taskforce on Women, Peace and Security. Ireland promotes integration of commitments relating to UNSCR 1325 at a variety of fora, including the Human Security Network (HSN), the International Network on Conflict and Fragility (INCAF) and OECD/DAC Network on Gender Equality (GENDERNET).

At the national level, implementation of UNSCR 1325 has been a key priority for the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade, as well as for the Irish Defence Forces and An Garda Síochána (the Irish Policing Service). The White Paper on Irish Aid (2006) explicitly states "we will work against GBV with all our partners internationally. In humanitarian and conflict situations, we are committed to the implementation of UNSCR 1325". Ireland's high-level commitment to tackling GBV was further strengthened by the acceptance of the "MDG 3 Torch"⁷ in September 2008. Under this initiative, Ireland committed to increasing resources for the promotion of gender equality and women's empowerment, intensifying actions on the prevention of GBV and promoting and implementing UNSCR 1325. The priorities of UNSCR 1325 are also reflected in Irish Aid's Gender, Humanitarian Relief, Civil Society and Governance policies.

The Irish Defence Forces only participate in UN mandated missions,⁸ which are required to incorporate the objectives of UNSCR 1325. In addition to the Defence Forces, An Garda Síochána has also undertaken United Nations peacekeeping duties abroad since 1989. The operational experience and expertise gained by the Defence Forces and An Garda Síochána abroad is a solid foundation from which Ireland can address issues relating to women, peace and security.

In terms of domestic policy, the Department of Justice and Equality, and the Department of Community, Equality and Gaeltacht Affairs, have overall responsibility for the advancement of gender equality through the implementation of the National Women's Strategy 2007-2016. In this strategy's section on development cooperation, UNSCR 1325 is identified as a key tool to enhance the capacity of Irish Aid and development partners to respond effectively to Gender-based Violence (GBV) in (post) conflict-affected environments, as well as promoting the active engagement of women in peacebuilding. The National Strategy on Domestic, Sexual and Gender-based Violence, 2010-2014 provides for a number of actions in relation to vulnerable groups, including migrants.

Ireland's National Action Plan comprises a narrative report which outlines the methodology, objectives and M&E. A detailed matrix of actions, SMART indicators and key actors is at Annex I.

⁷ The MDG Torch Campaign, an initiative of the Danish Government, was designed to secure increased commitments by all governments to making gender equality and women's empowerment a key issue and substantially increasing governments' resource allocation for gender equality and women's empowerment by 2010. These commitments to 'do something extra' at different levels of political and social leadership were designed to raise awareness on the impact that women's empowerment has to increase the potential to achieve the MDGs.

⁸ Participation by Defence Forces in overseas missions must meet three conditions, known as 'triple lock'. The mission must be authorized/mandated by the UN, approved by the Government, and must be approved by a resolution of Dáil Éireann, if the mission involves deployment of more than twelve personnel.

National Action Plan: Aims

Ireland is committed to implementing a National Action Plan with clear and specific actions and measurable outcomes which advance a more comprehensive understanding of what is entailed in the implementation of UNSCR 1325.

Ireland's National Action Plan aims to:

- a) Listen to the voices of women affected by conflict; strengthen women's leadership and implement accountability mechanisms;
- b) Strengthen institutional capacities and collaboration through comprehensive and effective training of staff deployed overseas and greater accountability;
- c) Support programmes to promote women's participation in conflict prevention, peacekeeping, peace negotiations, peacebuilding, and post conflict transition and governance; and
- d) Leverage Ireland's participation in global and regional fora to champion the implementation of UNSCR 1325.

Workshop discussions in Monrovia

Building on the UN Secretary-General's evaluation of the progress in the UN system-wide action plan and the recent development by UNIFEM and the Office of the Special Advisor on Gender Issues (OSAGI)⁹ of common indicators for monitoring implementation of UNSCR 1325, Ireland has developed a NAP that is in line with the commonly agreed pillars. These include 1) prevention; 2) participation; 3) protection; 4) relief, recovery and rehabilitation; and 5) the promotion of the principles of UNSCR 1325 and gender perspectives.¹⁰ Through commitments made by various government departments, therefore, Ireland will make a direct contribution to realising key objectives across the five pillars at the international level.

⁹ UNIFEM, OSAGI, International Training and Research Institute for Advancement of Women, and the Division for Advancement of Women are now all merged into the UN Women, the United Nations New Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women.

¹⁰ These pillars are laid out in the Secretary General's reports on Women, Peace and Security (S/2010/498).

National Action Plan: Methodology

Ireland's NAP was drafted in line with the following principles:

1) A transparent and inclusive consultation process with women affected by conflict living in both conflict and non-conflict settings. The development of Ireland's NAP was informed by a cross-learning initiative involving participants from Ireland, Northern Ireland, Liberia and Timor-Leste. The cross-learning process was designed to draw upon the experiences of those directly affected by conflict on how best to promote women's participation, leadership and interests in conflict resolution, peacebuilding, peace negotiations and post-conflict transitions.

There were three principal outputs to the cross-learning initiative. First, it has acted as a catalyst for lesson-sharing between the countries and regions involved. Second, the report of the process is intended to feed into policy discussions at the United Nations, and indeed into other policy communities such as the EU, AU and OSCE. Finally, the report¹¹ has also informed the preparation of Ireland's NAP.

The Government of Ireland also supported a consultation process with women from conflict-affected countries living in Ireland. The process involved a series of workshops structured to facilitate discussion on the issues of prevention, participation, protection, relief, recovery and rehabilitation, with a specific focus on monitoring and evaluation. The report¹² of this consultation provided a useful input to the NAP and fostered cooperation between government departments and civil society organisations.

2) Establishment of a consultative group on Women, Peace and Security including representatives from government departments, academia and civil society. The Consultative Group (see annex II for list of members), led by an independent Chair¹³, was closely involved in the development of the NAP and members also provided considered input on monitoring and evaluation through a Technical Working Group.¹⁴

3) An audit of existing commitments and actions across government departments on implementation of UNSCR 1325. Stocktaking of existing activities was essential to develop a NAP that would address critical gaps and formulate actions to advance the implementation of UNSCR 1325. The Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade developed a comprehensive questionnaire structured along the principal elements of UNSCR 1325, which was circulated to government departments and posted online for input by civil society organisations.

4) An independent drafter of the NAP. The Consultative Group strongly recommended that the NAP have an independent drafter to synthesise and coordinate input from government departments and civil society.¹⁵

5) SMART indicators which can be effectively tracked. SMART (Specific, Measurable, Achievable, Relevant and Time-bound) indicators are essential to enable monitoring of commitments and actions. Ireland's NAP sets out both quantitative and qualitative indicators in a matrix in line with the pillars developed by the Technical Working Group on Indicators supported by UNIFEM and OSAGI.

6) Monitoring and evaluation. An effective NAP is a 'living document'. It is modified and adapted as lessons are learned and challenges are identified. Monitoring and evaluation also requires that the NAP has a coordinated reporting mechanism used by all stakeholders which ensures accountability for implementation. It must also include processes for ongoing input from civil society organisations and women affected by conflict.

14 The members of the Technical Working Group (TWG), which provided extensive research and technical assistance underpinning the development of Annex I, including:

- Niamh Reilly (Convenor of the TWG), Global Women's Studies, NUI Galway
- Kieran Clifford, Amnesty International Irish Section
- Finola Finan, Trocaire
- Sorcha Tunney, Amnesty International Irish Section
- Melanie Hoewer, DFAT Ph.D. Scholar, UCD
- Colm Byrne, Irish Committee of the Red Cross
- Phil Killeen, Glencree Centre for Peace and Reconciliation.

15 Independent Drafter, Dr. Nata Duvvury, prepared the initial NAP submission based on consultation meetings with Government representatives and units, civil society members of the Consultative Group, including the Technical Working Group, and with the Coordinator of the series of consultations with women affected by conflict in Ireland, Shirley Graham.

National Action Plan: Objectives and Actions

Responding to the UN Secretary-General's support for the development of a comprehensive framework to implement UNSCR 1325 and other UN obligations on women, peace and security, and his urging Member States to utilise the indicators developed to date (S/2010/498), the Irish NAP is structured along the main pillars of:

1. prevention
2. participation
3. protection
4. relief, recovery and rehabilitation
5. promotion by the Irish Government of steps to implement UNSCR 1325.

Pillar 1: Prevention of Conflict, Including Gender-Based Violence (GBV) and Sexual Exploitation and Abuse (SEA)

The two main objectives under this pillar are:

- a) Provide comprehensive and effective training on human rights, gender equality, humanitarian law and UNSCR 1325 to personnel deployed by Ireland on overseas missions.
- b) Strengthen capacity of partners and CSOs to effectively prevent and respond to GBV in conflict-affected countries and contexts.

Comprehensive training on human rights, gender equality, humanitarian law and UNSCR 1325 and other UN obligations on women, peace and security of all personnel (military, police and civilian) deployed overseas is essential. Some gender training is currently in place, including for example, Defence Forces' Human Rights in Peace Support Operations Train the Trainers courses, which include modules on protection of women and girls. The training, using participatory methods such as scenario development, gives guidance to soldiers in relation to how women and girls' particular interests and needs can be met in conflict situations.

Within conflict settings, partner organisations need to be supported to develop and implement internationally accepted guidelines on preventing and responding to GBV and SEA. In the Cross-Learning Report, women in conflict settings called for programmes to meet the health needs of women experiencing GBV. Participants also recognised that to effectively prevent GBV and SEA, priority needs to be given to ensuring gender sensitive legislation is in place and the meaningful collection of relevant data.

The Irish Government commits to:

- 1) Undertake an audit of existing training modules to integrate the objectives of UNSCR 1325;
- 2) Enhance training of all relevant staff (civilian and military) deployed on overseas missions to ensure understanding of UNSCR 1325;
- 3) Incorporate questions on WPS in post-deployment briefings to assess the effectiveness of training;
- 4) Strengthen cross-learning within An Garda Síochána;
- 5) Support the capacity of partner organisations to develop and implement programmes addressing GBV and SEA, including through the adoption of internationally available guidelines.
- 6) Strengthen guidance to partners on their obligations under UNSCR 1325 including supporting gender sensitive legislation and justice sector reform.

(See Annex I, Pillar 1 for detailed actions, key actors and indicators)

Pillar 2: Participation and Representation of Women in Decision Making

The three objectives in this pillar are:

- a) Increase the participation of women in Ireland's peacekeeping, international development and peacebuilding activities;
- b) Incorporate gender perspectives and actively support women's participation in Ireland's peacekeeping, international development and peacebuilding activities; and
- c) Promote the full and equal participation of women in decision-making in conflict management, peacebuilding activities, security sector reform, peace agreements negotiations, and post-conflict governance and implementation of peace agreements.

Participation and representation of women in all peacekeeping, peace negotiations, peacebuilding, and post conflict activities is a central principle of UNSCR 1325. The UN Secretary-General, in his 2004 report on Women, Peace and Security (S/2004/814) challenged member states to "analyse obstacles to increasing women's representation in peace operations and humanitarian responses, develop and implement recruitment strategies aimed at increasing the number of women, particularly in decision making positions, including in military and civilian police services; create a pool of pre-certified female candidates for senior level positions to ensure rapid deployment; and set indicators and benchmarks for women's equal participation in all aspects of elections process, based on a review of good practice."

Both the Defence Forces and An Garda Síochána have made significant progress in increasing the recruitment of women. The Defence Force's Equality, Diversity and Equal Status Policy (2007) has a strong emphasis on equality of opportunity in recruitment, overseas deployment and career promotion for women. A number of measures have also been introduced over recent years to promote more equal representation of women in An Garda Síochána, including a new, gender neutral, recruitment process; family-friendly policies such as job-sharing, term-time, parental leave, and career breaks; and gender-balanced interview boards. Despite these measures, women continue to account for 6% and 18% in overseas missions of the Defence Forces and An Garda Síochána respectively.¹⁶ The Defence Forces have established an Internal Focus Group to explore barriers to career development and the advancement of women in the armed forces.

The Irish Government commits to:

- 1) Implement recommendations to address recruitment and retention of women within the Defence Forces;
- 2) Continue monitoring participation of women in overseas missions (military and civilian) across all ranks;
- 3) Create and maintain a list of overseas postings as special advisors and special investigators;
- 4) Promote inclusion of gender expertise in civilian rosters;
- 5) Require civil society partners to ensure gender-balanced participation in decision making processes within humanitarian assistance programmes;
- 6) Provide support to cross-border, and cross-community initiatives to strengthen women's political participation in Ireland, North and South;
- 7) Provide support to existing partners and locally-based CSOs to develop programmes to promote the inclusion of gender perspectives and women's effective participation in the negotiation and implementation of peace agreements and initiatives that enhance women's effective participation in political processes, decision-making and representation in parliament in conflict-affected contexts;

¹⁶ An Garda Síochána has a service requirement of 8 years before being deployed overseas. As women now constitute 24% of the total force, there will be a steady increase in the percentage of women police officers deployed overseas in the coming years.

- 8) Continue to support international mediation organisations, which have a focus on the principles of UNSCR 1325, particularly the inclusion of women as mediators.

(See Annex 1, Pillar 2 for detailed actions, key actors and indicators).

Pillar 3: Protection From Gender-Based Violence (GBV) and Sexual Exploitation And Abuse (SEA) and Other Violations of Women's Human Rights and International Humanitarian Law

The main objectives in this pillar include:

- a) Ensure Irish personnel are held accountable for their actions in relation to ensuring the security and protection of women while deployed on peacekeeping and overseas missions;
- b) Strengthen the institutional and collective capacity of Irish organisations to respond in a coordinated and effective way to GBV and SEA experienced by women affected by conflict;
- c) Ensure there are accountability mechanisms in place to deal with discrimination, sexual harassment and bullying in state organisations involved in implementing Ireland's UNSCR 1325 NAP.

A priority for the Irish Defence Forces is the development of a uniform reporting and sanctioning mechanism for UN peacekeeping missions. A recommendation by women in conflict settings, set out in the Cross-Learning Report, states that "countries that do not sanction offending personnel should not be allowed to contribute troops to future missions."¹⁷ To assess the effectiveness of the implementation of code of conduct in peacekeeping operations requires that the perspectives of local women on their level of safety be considered.

¹⁷ Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade, Conflict Resolution Unit, 2010. Voices of experience: Cross-Learning Process on UN Security Council Resolution 1325. Government of Ireland: Dublin.

The Government of Ireland has made progress in establishing comprehensive policies to address issues of Discrimination, Sexual Harassment and Bullying (DSHB). There is, however, a need for ongoing review of DSHB policies to ensure they are comprehensive and updated.

UNSCR 1325 focuses on women affected by conflict irrespective of whether they are residing in conflict settings or have migrated to other countries. The needs of migrant women affected by conflict are of direct relevance to receiving countries fully meeting their obligations to uphold the implementation of UNSCR 1325 and other UN obligations on women, peace and security. Within Ireland, the Department of Justice and Equality, along with An Garda Síochána, ensure that a comprehensive information leaflet by the Office of the Refugee Application Commissioner (ORAC) is provided to asylum seekers on the day they apply for asylum.¹⁸ The applicant is also notified regarding the availability of legal representation, and of the existence of the Refugee Legal Service, which has an office in the offices of the ORAC. These requirements to provide information are mandatory. In addition, An Garda Síochána reaches out to migrant women and women affected by conflict living in Ireland, through its Office of Racial and Intercultural Relations which deploys Ethnicity Officers within the community including Reception Centres of the immigration system to provide information on the individual's rights and the obligations of the Garda to protect these rights.

The Consultation report¹⁹ with women affected by conflict indicated that a majority of participants did not have a clear understanding of the information provided and the services available to them; they rarely reported their experiences of GBV and SEA during conflict or during their asylum application review process; and many reported feeling fear or distrust of authorities more generally. There appears, therefore, to be a significant gap between the commitment and current efforts of the government departments to provide full information and support, and the perceptions of migrant women and girls, including asylum seekers, affected by conflict.

The Irish Government commits to:

- 1) Develop codes of conduct for personnel on overseas missions supported by the Irish state;

¹⁸ The leaflet, available in 22 languages and on the ORAC website, includes comprehensive information regarding the asylum process in Ireland and also includes some contact details for organisations that support asylum seekers.

- 2) Support CSO partners to develop codes of conduct as per standards set out in the Irish Government's protection policy;
- 3) Advocate for the development of a universal reporting and sanctioning mechanism of all personnel serving in overseas UN missions who are found guilty of gender-based crimes, including crimes of a sexual nature;
- 4) Ensure that measures on preventing GBV and SEA are incorporated in code of conduct of peacekeeping missions in which Ireland participates;
- 5) Support UN Office of Internal Oversight Services' efforts to undertake a global audit of breaches of discipline in relation to GBV and SEA;
- 6) Provide support to partners undertaking surveys on local women's perceptions regarding their treatment by peacekeeping personnel and their level of safety;
- 7) Support response by partners on GBV and SEA [including continued support to Joint Consortium on Gender-based Violence, funding support to CSO interventions that empower women, tackle gender equality, address GBV, and provide financial support to innovative research on obligations on WPS];
- 8) Strengthen outreach to migrant women and girls affected by conflict, including those seeking asylum, to ensure raised awareness and increased utilisation of services available to all women experiencing domestic, sexual and gender-based violence in Ireland;
- 9) Subject to resources, facilitate established non-governmental organisations in their efforts to document the experiences of women and girls who have been affected by conflict in their countries of origin in order to better inform public service provisions and interaction with these women and girls;

- 10) Introduce a single application system for protection applications to fully consider all aspects of their permission to remain in Ireland in a single process;
- 11) Conduct ongoing review of DSHB policies to ensure that they are in alignment with changes in legislation, Labour Court recommendations, and evolving international best practice; and
- 12) Devise and conduct pre-deployment surveys to ensure awareness of DSHB policies and procedures by all military and police officers in peacekeeping missions.

(See Annex I, Pillar 3 for detailed actions, key actors and indicators).

Pillar 4: Relief, Recovery, and Rehabilitation

The two main objectives are:

- a) Ensuring that security sector reform activities supported by Ireland are responsive to the different security needs and priorities of women.
- b) Ensuring that disarmament, demobilisation and reintegration activities supported by Ireland are responsive to the different security needs and priorities of women.

Security sector reform (SSR) is essential for conflict prevention and to stabilise countries in the aftermath of conflict. Internationally accepted tools, such as the INSTRAW/DCAF Gender and Security Reform Toolkit, suggest that best practice to ensure gender sensitive security reform includes incorporating women in the design, implementation and monitoring of such programmes through local consultation. A recommendation in the Cross-Learning Report by women in conflict settings echoes this and demands that existing guidelines need to be implemented. Ireland will support gender sensitive SSR programmes that incorporate women and include gender-sensitive community perception studies to assess security threats.

Today, it is widely accepted that women are active combatants in many conflicts around the world. However, programmes of Demobilisation, Disarmament and Reintegration (DDR) tend to exclude the needs of women, who may be perceived to be mainly absent from active combat. Measures such as separate demobilisation camps will be encouraged by Ireland to meet the specific needs of former women combatants.

Ireland is involved in a range of mine awareness, clearance, victim assistance, small arms and light weapons (SALW) risk education and explosive remnants of war (ERW) initiatives. All mine clearance and awareness initiatives are guided by Irish Aid's Humanitarian Relief Policy (2009)²⁰ that is designed to ensure the continued provision of timely and flexible funding to organisations which demonstrate a clear capacity to deliver effective humanitarian assistance, including Humanitarian Mine Action (HMA). Building on this ongoing work, Ireland will support civil society projects and multilateral actions that incorporate gender guidelines and international best practice guidelines on HMA developed by United Nations Mine Action Service.

Truth and Recovery processes have intrinsic value both in post-conflict rehabilitation and recovery and ensuring the prevention of future conflict. Women affected by conflict may see this process as important, both for their own ability to recover after a conflict, and in order to deepen the understanding of why the conflict happened and how it can be prevented in the future. In order to ensure that women's perspectives are fully integrated, this important process should be incorporated in programmes delivering relief and recovery, and rehabilitation services.

The Irish Government commits to:

- 1) Ensure the mainstreaming of UNSCR 1325 in SSR, DDR, and HMA funding proposals, reports, and monitoring and evaluation mechanisms.
- 2) Encourage proposals that include systematic consultation with women's CSOs in the design, implementation and evaluations of SSR programmes.
- 3) Support partners that incorporate measures to integrate women and girls in DDR, such as separate demobilisation camps.
- 4) Ensure that all Irish supported projects adhere to best practice in HMA, including incorporating consultations with women affected by landmines.

(See Annex I, Pillar 4, for detailed actions, key actors and indicators).

Pillar 5: Promotion of UNSCR 1325 in International, Regional and National Arenas

The main objectives under this pillar include:

- a) Strengthened institutional capacity to ensure that commitments to gender equality, human rights and UNSCR 1325 are incorporated into peacebuilding, peacekeeping and post-conflict transition.
- b) Using regional and international foreign policy instruments to promote the principles of UNSCR 1325.

Ireland has signed and ratified all relevant international human rights and humanitarian conventions and treaties, and is fully conscious of the need to ensure that gender issues are taken into account within the framework of all international instruments. Ireland's advocacy to date has focused on elements of UNSCR 1325 including promoting gender equality, women's empowerment and women's political participation, addressing sexual violence, and incorporating women's needs and priorities in Humanitarian Mine Action. Ireland's championing of UNSCR 1325 is comprehensive, with its advocacy efforts in a variety of diplomatic and political areas, including high profile fora such as the Group of Friends of 1325, the EU Taskforce on Women, Peace and Security, the Human Security Network, OECD Development Assistance Committee (DAC), the Network on Gender Equality (GENDERNET) and meetings of the Convention on Cluster Munitions. Building on the diplomatic advocacy efforts already underway, Ireland will strategically utilise new opportunities such as the EU Common Security and Defence Policy (CSDP) to encourage systematic integration of UNSCR 1325 into all new missions. Ireland will highlight UNSCR 1325 over the course of its forthcoming Chairmanship-in-Office in 2012 of the Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE). Ireland will also support UN Women, the new UN entity for gender equality and the empowerment of women, to strengthen international coordination and monitoring of the implementation of UNSCR 1325.

The Irish Government commits to:

- 1) Update references to UNSCR 1325 in relevant policy documents and strategy papers.
- 2) Advocate for the exclusion from post-conflict amnesty provisions of impunity for war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide, including gender-based crimes.

- 3) Engage with appropriate Northern Ireland authorities to encourage development of policies and measures consistent with the aims of UNSCR 1325, in consultation with civil society organisations.
- 4) Make representations in policy fora to promote the obligations of partners to encourage active participation of women, as well as recognise the needs of women and girls in DDR programmes.
- 5) Advocate with UN DPKO, CDU and other appropriate UN fora for the revision and upgrading, in line with the principles of UNSCR 1325 and other UN obligations on WPS, the UN pocket card, "Ten Rules: Code of Personal Conduct for Blue Helmets", issued to all UN peacekeepers before deployment.
- 6) Urge all states, through statements at the UN, to sign and ratify international human rights treaties, especially CEDAW.
- 7) Support UN entities, particularly UN Women, directly involved in facilitating implementation of UNSCR 1325.
- 8) Advocate for women to hold 50% of UNSG Special Representative and Special Envoy positions.
- 9) Contribute to the UNSG's centralised roster of women candidates to be nominated as Special Representatives and Special Envoys.
- 10) Advocate for an increase in women's representation in UN peacekeeping missions in which Ireland participates, particularly as military observers and civilian police.
- 11) Advocate for inclusion of comprehensive information on steps taken to implement UNSCR 1325 and to combat GBV and SEA, within the framework of the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) mechanism of the Human Rights Council.
- 12) Participate in research on the implementation of UNSCR 1325 in the EU CSDP in order to identify areas where Ireland can exercise leadership to bring changes in policy and practice.
- 13) Use Ireland's position as Chair in Office of the OSCE in 2012 to promote implementation of UNSCR 1325, including advocating for member countries to develop UNSCR 1325 national action plans.
- 14) Engage with OECD/DAC, GENDERNET and INCAF to effectively mainstream UNSCR 1325.

(See Annex I, Pillar 5 for detailed actions, key actors and indicators).

National Action Plan: Monitoring and Evaluation

Monitoring and evaluation is critical to ensure the National Action Plan is 'a living document' and to ensure meaningful implementation of UNSCR 1325 and related UN obligations on women, peace, and security.

Monitoring and Evaluation Structure

A Monitoring Group (MG) will be formed to oversee progress on the implementation of Ireland's 1325 NAP. Led by the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade, the MG will consist of representatives from all relevant government departments, units and agencies involved including the Department of Defence (DD), Defence Forces, the Department of Justice and Equality (DJE), An Garda Síochána, the Garda Immigration Bureau and Irish Aid. The MG will also include representatives of civil society and academia with demonstrable experience and expertise on issues relevant to UNSCR 1325. In particular, the MG will work with the appropriate Oireachtas committee to ensure involvement by parliamentarians. The chair of the MG will be independent and come from outside the Government system.

The Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade will have responsibility for ongoing monitoring issues of identified in the NAP, and will provide support to review processes. Appropriate human and financial resources will be provided, supplemented by external expertise, if necessary.

Monitoring Process

The Monitoring Group will meet half-yearly to provide input and address issues relating to implementation as they arise. A progress report on the implementation of Ireland's 1325 NAP will be prepared and presented 18 months after the adoption of the NAP and again at the end of the first three year phase. A mechanism will be developed to ensure ongoing engagement of women affected by conflict in the monitoring of the NAP.

The progress report at the end of the first three years should also include an evaluation of the NAP by an independent consultant.

Workshop in Belfast

Concluding Remarks

This National Action Plan is a further contribution by Ireland to international efforts to underpin implementation of UNSCR 1325 and other UN obligations on WPS. Ireland's National Action Plan reflects a consensus reached through a process of consultation with stakeholders.

Ireland's NAP advances understanding of the obligations of UNSCR 1325 and other UN resolutions on WPS, to include reference to migrant women and girls, including asylum seekers, affected by conflict. Another critical dimension of the Irish NAP is the recognition of the relevance of UNSCR 1325 and other UN obligations on WPS to cross border efforts in Ireland to promote gender equality and women's human rights.

The NAP consolidates existing efforts and enhances coordination and collaboration through system wide actions on training and ensuring development and implementation of codes of conduct for all personnel. It promotes the integration of the perspectives of women on the ground in assessing the effectiveness of training and the accountability of peacekeeping personnel deployed by Ireland. It also promotes the development of programmes on gender equality, political participation, GBV and SEA, SSR and DDR. The NAP reiterates the need for partners to build their capacity to implement UNSCR 1325, including the adoption of international guidelines and toolkits.

Ireland's NAP should be understood as a 'living document' that will address challenges and incorporate new lessons through regular M&E reviews. The mid-year review, as well as the evaluation report with the final review, will provide input for the articulation of a revised NAP at the end of three years. Issues that need to be considered in the review will be highlighted as part of the M&E process.

Annex I: Ireland's National Action Plan on UNSCR 1325 Monitoring Framework

PILLAR 1: PREVENTION OF CONFLICT, INCLUDING GENDER-BASED VIOLENCE (GBV) AND SEXUAL EXPLOITATION AND ABUSE (SEA)

OUTCOME OBJECTIVE 1: Effective GBV and SEA preventive mechanisms established and implemented at local, national and international levels

IMPACT OBJECTIVE 1: Reduction in levels of all forms of violence against women, especially GBV and SEA

Objective	Actions	Actor/s	Indicator	Target/Timeframe
P1.O1 Provide comprehensive and effective training on human rights, gender equality, UNSCR 1325 and other UN obligations to women, peace and security, to all personnel deployed by Ireland on overseas missions.	P1.A1.1 Conduct an audit of UNTSI training materials to ensure that they comply with best practice and permissible mandates and responsibilities of Irish Defence Forces in relation to the prevention of GBV and SEA and the promotion of gender equality, women's human rights and implementation of international obligations on Women, Peace and Security (WPS) including UNSCRs 1325, 1820, 1888 and 1889.
