Exhibition Opening in the Embassy: “Faraway Longings” 4 February 2016 at 6.30pm

While conceptions of Irish diaspora for many years have been intertwined with ideas of forced emigration, in recent times emigration does not necessarily have to be associated with immense sadness of separation and final farewells which led to the creation of rituals such as The American Wake.

This exhibition looks at the positive impacts of the Irish artistic diaspora in Germany and will incorporate works that touch on the themes of freedom, travel and wandering. The exhibition investigates dichotomies and attempts at their reconciliation in the new culture in which the artists find themselves. The selected artists will engage with themes relating to landscape, concepts of home, aspects of place and heritage in a globalized and post-colonial world and the exhibition will look at how cultural ties are retained or escaped in the contemporary Irish diaspora.

Curator: Sheena Malone / Artists: Maurice Doherty, Adam Fearon, Jane Hughes, Enda O’Donoghue and Ciarán Walsh.

Niall Connolly – “Then We Take Berlin”

12.2.2016 at 8pm , Artliners Berlin , 10245 Berlin

“Terrific. Disarming and beautifully crafted folk-pop. Connolly is a witty storyteller and a not-to-be-missed songsmith.” – The Chicago Tribune

To make great art, you have to do whatever it takes. A prime example is singer-songwriter Niall Connolly, who paid for the recording expenses of his 2001 debut album, ‘Songs from a Corner’, by undergoing medical trials at Shandon Clinic in Cork City. Since then, he has played thousands of concerts throughout the U.S. and Europe.

As his ensuing career has demonstrated, Connolly has run the whole spectrum of performance, playing everything from dive bars and house concerts to embassies and major festivals. Currently ranked No. 1 in the ReverbNation Folk Charts for New York City, his songs have been covered by more than 20 acts worldwide. <http://niallconnolly.com/event/niall-connolly-then-we-take-berlin/>
