As we head into the wonderful Japanese autumn, we look forward to one of our busiest periods of the year.

On 19 October, a delegation from Keidanren (Japan Business Federation) will visit Ireland, the first since 2004. They will meet with the Irish Ministers for Jobs, Enterprise and Innovation, Mr Richard Bruton TD, and Public Expenditure and Reform, Mr Brendan Howlin TD, as well as IDA, EI and SFI.

On 30/31 October, the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland (RCSI) and Japan’s Hoshi University will host a joint workshop on Future Healthcare - Biomedical Sciences, Technologies & Applications in Tokyo, an inaugural event following their recent signing of an MOU.

A delegation from the Irish Funds Industry Association (IFIA) will be in Tokyo on 5 November and will participate in a conference on the Irish Regulated Funds environment.

The Embassy recently hosted another Yeats 150 event in conjunction with IASIL, a series of talks by Professor Patrick Crotty of Aberdeen University in Hiroshima and Tokyo on Irish poetry, from 3-9 October. The poet, Moya Cannon, also participated in the IASIL event.

A delegation from the San-in Japan Ireland Association visited Ireland from 6 to 16 October to mark the exhibition ‘Open Mind of Lafcadio Hearn, A Homecoming’ at Dublin’s Little Museum and, while there, met with President Higgins at Áras an Uachtaráin.

I was delighted to give a talk in early September on Ireland at the Embassy’s nearest school, Kojimachi Gakuen. The school plans to send over 100 students per year to Ireland for a short-term English study programme.

I wish also to announce the departure this month of my colleague, Second Secretary at the Embassy, Mr Elliot Milton, after over 4 years here. I wish him well in his future career.

Last but not least, I am delighted to announce that Fr. Dónal Doyle, SJ will receive the Presidential Distinguished Services Award at a ceremony in Áras an Uachtaráin on 3 December. He is the first Japan-based Irish person to be so honoured.

George Boole, Global Irish Newsletter, Tourism

George Boole, Irishman and Father of the Information Age.

November 2 is the bicentenary of the birth of George Boole, the forefather of the information age and the first professor of mathematics at University College Cork. To mark the occasion University College Cork has launched a UCC Brings Boole2School. This education initiative, the first of its kind, will result in school students across the globe studying logic in a Boolean Maths lesson, all on the same day — November 2.

Once registered, teachers receive free age-appropriate lesson plans, puzzles and worksheets, developed by Maths Circles Ireland in consultation with teachers, and available in English, Irish and Mandarin, for students aged 8 to 18. More than 25,000 school students across 12 countries are already signed up to take the lessons. (www.georgeboole.com/boole2school/).

If you are in a school where this might be of interest, why not join up?

Irish Golf Tourism

The Irish company, Fairways and FunDays Limited, is now recruiting part-time agents to promote Ireland as a golf and leisure tourist destination. This is a part-time role and may appeal to members of the Irish community who are involved in social, sporting or cultural activities. For further information, see www.fairwaysandfundays.com
Employing over 2,000 people globally, FEXCO is one of the country’s most distinctive success stories in the area of financial solutions and technology. The company is perhaps best known for its pioneering role in the development of dynamic currency conversion (DCC) and is the world’s leading provider of the service, which allows credit card users to avail of exchange rates at the time of a purchase in a foreign currency, rather than later in the billing cycle. In 2013, FEXCO entered into partnership with Mitsubishi UFJ NICOS Co., Ltd. (MUN), Japan’s major credit card company.

Through this partnership, FEXCO has become the largest provider of DCC in the country. The initial roll out targeted business travellers and tourists to Tokyo. John Casey, vice president, Key Accounts APAC at FEXCO, explains the timing proved particularly opportune, “given the upsurge in business travel and the new government focus on inbound tourism as well as the attractiveness of the yen to foreign visitors”. The agreement between FEXCO and MUN was also, however, indicative of the careful nature of relationship building in Japan, as it represented the culmination of three years’ investment, from initial scoping and introductory meetings, to the gradual building of trust, with FEXCO ultimately establishing a base in Tokyo.

“To establish a relationship or partnership like we have with MUN requires a deep understanding of the business culture in Japan and how best to navigate it,’ Casey says.

FEXCO invested in this understanding – coordinating regular meetings at the outset between senior management and their counterparts at MUN. Technical experts were brought from Killorglin to Japan to showcase the technology and explain the integration and implementation, from inception through to delivery. “While FEXCO is the market leader in delivering DCC worldwide, we do face competition from other providers in securing partnerships of this nature. A huge component of the deal’s success lay in establishing trust initially, recognising the nuances in business culture in Japan and working at the appropriate pace.”

Setting up an office in Tokyo with a local team proved to be a key development in progressing the relationship. “Japanese is the first language of our team on the ground in Tokyo, affording us a significant advantage as they can accurately and succinctly communicate messages back into the FEXCO world. From our partner’s perspective, it was also valuable that they could see we had invested locally.” With 10+ employees servicing the Asia market, it represents a greater commitment than other countries might require. However, the reward for that commitment is long-term access to a major economy and an affluent market. “Trust is key to doing business in Japan and the sense that loyalty is long-term is apparent,” Casey says.

“To our Japanese partner, we are not only a service provider, but an integral part of their business. Japan represents a significant and exciting growth opportunity for FEXCO, and we feel we are only at the tip of the iceberg in terms of prospects in the region.”
Over the last number of months, IDA Ireland has continued to attract FDI into Ireland. Some of the highlights include IBM, Accenture and SAS’s new Innovation and Analytics centres; the opening of Amgen’s new €300 million bio-pharmaceutical facility; and Uber’s announcement to open a Centre of Excellence in Limerick hiring 150 people. There are many more exciting projects, including investments in Pharmaceuticals, Medical Devices, High Tech and ICT, and Financial Services.

http://www.idaireland.com/newsroom/

IDA Ireland is also very happy to welcome the Japanese company, Rohm Semiconductor, to Ireland and to the IDA family. In July, Rohm, a $3 billion Kyoto-based electronic component company and a global leader in analog power IC solutions, purchased Cork based Powervation Ltd, for approximately $70M, in an all-cash transaction. Powervation Ltd, originally a spin-out from University of Limerick, is a digital power IC company that develops Digital Power Management system-on-chip (SoC) solutions.

We are also starting to see progress as a result of IDA’s cooperation with SFI’s ISCA (International Strategic Co-operation Award) programme. We hosted a number of seminars/meetings in Tokyo/Osaka in the area of Medical Devices in May, and in Connected Health in June. As a result of this, 2 Japanese companies will visit Ireland in October to explore opportunities in the area of medical devices and we just completed a follow-on workshop with a large Japanese ICT company in the area of connected health.

We will continue to promote Ireland’s attractiveness for Research, Development and Innovation and plan our next set of seminars/meetings in the exciting area of Cloud Computing/Data Analytics for early in 2016.

The very first Legends Tournament for ladies GAA organised by the Asian Country board secretary took place in Tokyo on August 22.

The Malaysian Ladies team played against Japan Ladies GAA. The game ended in a draw, but it was a really good experience ahead of the next big tournament. The Men’s teams came to cheer the Ladies on, and we had a fabulous party afterwards and enjoyed a great night.

And now, the biggest event of the year, the Asian Gaelic Games tournament will be held in Shanghai later this month from 24-25 October. Japan GAA will participate with one men’s team and two ladies’ teams. We have been training twice a week from April this year. Both our Men’s and Ladies’ teams are aiming to have a great time at the games and hopefully bring home some silverware!

Japan GAA is a unique team in that both the Men’s and Ladies’ teams consist of various nationalities including Irish, Japanese, American, Australian, Spanish, Swedish, Malaysian and so on. In particular, the large number of local Japanese players enjoying Irish sports always generates great interest at the Asian Gaelic Games.

Hopefully the next update will be of a successful tournament!

We will be in off season after the Asian Gaelic Games this year but will start training around March next year.

If you are interested in playing Gaelic football with us, please check our schedule on our homepage or feel free to contact us directly.
