1. Introduction

Irish Aid is the Irish Government’s programme for overseas development and is an integral part of Ireland’s foreign policy; in Tanzania, the Irish Aid programme is managed by the Embassy of Ireland. The Embassy works with the Government of Tanzania, UN agencies, international research institutions, and civil society organisations and other development partners to deliver on our overall goal of inclusive growth and reduced poverty and vulnerability in Tanzania.

The programme is guided by a five year Country Strategy Paper, a transition strategy is currently being developed for 2015-16 and a new five year strategy will start in 2017. The strategy has a significant emphasis on building government systems and a focus on partnership and interventions that deliver results for poor women and men and vulnerable communities. The programme is underpinned by a strong commitment to aid effectiveness and is aligned with the priorities of the Tanzanian Government’s National Development Plan, the MKUKUTA II (2010-2015)

With an annual budget of approximately €30 million, the programme is focused on improving livelihoods for male and female smallholder farmers and pastoralists, improving nutrition outcomes and ensuring better quality and equitable public health services, with a focus on maternal health. Cutting across all our work is a commitment to strengthened domestic accountability, good governance and gender equality,

Ireland’s approach to gender equality is informed by the understanding that gender inequality is a driver and outcome of persistent poverty. The Irish Aid programme seeks to ensure that interventions supported promote equal access to and control of resources and benefits, equal participation in political decision-making and equality under the law and in practice.

Irish Aid encourages its partners to undertake gender analysis to inform planning and adjust their strategies to ensure that women and girls have an opportunity to achieve their potential. We work with partners to establish clear gender equality results and to ensure that women and girls access the benefits of interventions. This is a particular focus in the agricultural programming.
